"Freely you have recieved; freely give."

1519[I]

Luther's Works

The Freely Given Edition

These six clear words from our Lord have birthed The Freely Given Edition of Luther's Works, a new public domain collection of the Reformer's writings. In following Paul's example and Christ's teaching, I have joyfully given up my rights to profit and control for the sake of the Gospel. This has been done so that the thorough research and text of these volumes may be shared, adapted, and tanslated to suit the innumerable contexts of ministry in the global Church. In other words, these volumes are for you. It is my hope that such an act will allow for the flourishing of both the Christian faith and Lutheran scholarship, and that this labor may work towards ending the spiritual famine of the global Church caused by the compromise of ministry through reciprocity. Underqualified and ill-equipped, I am not one of whom it can be said "He did a good work," or even "He tried to do a good work." I too merely have wished to do a good work, and no matter how many marks of Nazareth it may bear, please do not say that nothing good ever comes from there.

Tessaradecas
Triglottas